Stampede winners stripped of grand champ title

BY KEVIN VINK
 MVP Staff

A series of strange events both preceded and followed the victory of two men who won the Grand Champion UFA Steer Classic competition at the Calgary Stampede, only to be stripped of the title two weeks later due to the steer's blood testing positive for unspecified pharmaceuticals.

Since the disqualification, Royden Anderson of Didsbury says the blood samples were destroyed before they could be independently tested, which he and Riley Chalack - of Carstairs - requested upon disqualification.

The pair did a joint entry with Chalack's steer, and shortly before the competition, the steer was having some problems walking due to inflammation from a previous injury, says Anderson.

He notes Chalack asked official Stampede veterinarian Ryan Wennekamp if he could administer Anafen, a non-steroidal, anti-inflammatory analgesic for livestock, but Wennekamp suggested the competitors give their steer Banamine instead.

Anderson said that was the only pharmaceutical that the steer received, and the only one that could have shown up on a blood test.

Banamine is a non-steroidal, anti-inflammatory and anti-pyretic drug, except that it stays in an animal's system for 96 hours rather than a day, according to veterinarian and Merck representative Roy Lewis, who works out of Westlock.

As Banamine is a Merck product he knows it well, and explained though an animal could feel better, and possibly perform better with Banamine, it isn't meant to be, or used as a performance enhancer.

"It's insignificant," said Lewis. "It's not like it's given for months to bring up the weight or muscle mass...it isn't set up that way. Indirectly? Maybe, but very indirectly."

"You could argue both sides, but really, for all intents and purposes, it's not a performance enhancing drug."

Anderson said that when people hear that the steer was disqualified for drugs, they assume it was steroids or a high-performance drug, which is not the case.

"Banamine is the equivalent to giving a person Aspirin," said Anderson. "It just takes away the pain, which could make the steer walk better."

When the steer was having its blood drawn,

Anderson said he repeatedly asked the veterinarian if he remembered giving permission for the use of Banamine.

"I kept asking, like four times, and they kept looking at me weird because they had already answered yes, but I wanted to make sure they remembered (that moment)," he adds.

The kicker is that the blood was being drawn in the presence of Logan Chalack—the reserve grand champion at the time and now grand champion – and others. Chalack, who won the title of reserve grand champion before the disqualification, and who is now the grand champion, said he witnessed this when officials were getting the steer ready to have its blood taken.

"(Anderson said) the steer had had Banamine, and the vet said that was OK," says Logan Chalack.

"(The vet) said there were no problems with it, because Banamine is a 96-hour withdrawal period and the steer wouldn't have been killed for two weeks."

He notes he didn't think Banamine should have disqualified the steer, simply because the vet said it was OK for the steer to have been given the Banamine.

Main street strip mall nears completion

BY KEVIN VINK
MVP Staff

The Cayenne Holdings Ltd. strip mall on 20th Street between AG Foods and the Mountain View Credit Union is expected to be completed near the end of August, say officials. "I would say by the end of August, the asphalt should be in place and the building will be ready for occupancy in terms of getting leases signed," stated Dale Shippelt, a director and one of four shareholders in the project.

He explained the shop bays will not be fully completed until leaseholders have signed on, as the building was designed with versatility in mind.

"So what we do is we leave it as a gravel floor so that when we sign up a tenant - depending on where they want the bathrooms or what kind of usage it is - it gives us the ability to be versatile on the inside as to what their requirement is."

By completion, the workers will have insulated and drywalled the roof and back wall, and left everything else open, so that wiring and other things can be custom-installed for leaseholders, he added.

The building has 10 sections, and tenants will have the ability to lease multiple bays to suit their needs, he noted.

"If they need 2,400 square feet, we would just give them two bays. So it gives us versatility in terms of space so if they want, they can move the wall over, depending on if they want less or more," he said.

The big points that Shippelt hopes will help sell the building include a good curb appeal, street-front location, as well as being located on main street in a high-traffic area.

Though there are no concrete agreements in place yet, he said that Cayenne officials are currently in discussions with potential tenants, and he is hoping to finalize some deals as the scheduled completion date nears.

STEER

"The vet should have known the rules and regulations and should have stopped it before then. The vets that are doing the work for the Stampede should know the ethics and the conducts," he said. "The vets OK'd it, so there should be no problem on that side."

Though he is now the holder of the title, he adds, "It's not a great win."

The test results came back positive for unspecified drugs, and neither Riley Chalack nor Anderson were told what was found on the test.

They were given a waiver to sign admitting that they were being disqualified for drug use, and neither would sign unless an independent re-test was performed on the sample, said Anderson.

"And when I asked for the proof or the blood samples they refused to give it to me," he said.

"I don't know how to approach it now. They've already destroyed the evidence, what else are they going to do? I don't know, I guess we'll have to discuss what the next steps would be."

A re-test is now impossible because the sample was destroyed, and Anderson says the only group who could have ordered that is the Stampede officials.

Tim Chalack, Riley's father says "Here's the kicker - if the vet had said no (to Banamine), they wouldn't have given him anything. It's not like they were trying to cheat."

He finds it odd that a blood sample was even taken, and though it is general practice for competition horses to be tested, he has never seen or heard of a test being done on a steer.

"There has never, never been a steer blood sample before, as far as we know," says Chalack. "The Stampede reserves the right to take the blood, but it's never been done before."

Anderson said he suspects a grudge between the president of the steer committee and the man who sold Riley Chalack the steer.

Photo submitted

Participants and officials are all smiles after Riley Chalack and Royden Anderson were named the Grand Champions of the UFA Steer Classic at this year's Calgary Stampede. The pair were disqualified after a blood test showed positive for unspecified drugs shortly after.

Chamber hosts another successful breakfast

BY KEVIN VINK
MVP Staff

The Didsbury and District Chamber of Commerce hosted its annual pancake breakfast last Friday, Aug. 16, serving about 600 people, according to officials.

Gregg Huyghebaert, vice-president of the chamber, said he's happy with how the event went.

"It went pretty well," said Huyghebaert. "We had a really good turnout and a lot of volunteers came out."

The chamber was collecting donations for both the Mountain View Food Bank and a Canadian charity called Junior Achievement (JA), which works to help young adults gain financial literacy, work readiness, and entrepreneurial skills, he added.

The tallies were not complete on Friday, but he said there were plenty of food donations and some cash was also donated, which will be split between the food bank and JA, as well as to cover costs of hosting the breakfast.

There was a climbing wall, children's games, and a horse from Neu Century Farms for the kids to pet.

"I think the children really enjoyed the games and petting the horses. I didn't win at road apple bingo though," he said, referring to a numbered chalk grid that was set up in the horse's pen, where people could bet on where the next 'road apple' would fall and the proceeds will be split between the chamber and the charities.

The Jail and Bail raised about $1,000 for the charities and the chamber, he said, and Gillian Shields, Diana Steer, Rick Mousseau, Nicole Aasen and Dana Munn were subjected to pampering by Angela Willberg of the Didsbury Massage Clinic, while the jailbirds asked people to bail them out.

The Didsbury Lions Club was there showing off its gazebo and selling raffle tickets and just before 10 a.m., a flash mob by Jazzercise Didsbury came to dance in the streets.

He wanted to thank everybody for coming out to enjoy a morning of fun and added that the volunteers made it possible.

"The chamber thanks everyone for coming out and having a very excellent event. It was a blast."

Seniors' care centre on schedule for 2014

BY KEVIN VINK
MVP Staff

The Bethany Care Centre being built on 15th Avenue east of the Didsbury High School is on schedule so far, and the anticipated completion in spring next year seems within reach, according to officials.

Kelsey Meehan, communications analyst for the Bethany Care Society, said that construction is on schedule and has been throughout the duration of the project.

"We are still on schedule for a spring 2014 opening," said Meehan.

"So that will be great. In terms of the structure itself, what I know is that it's mostly closed in at this point, and right now they are just sort of working on finishing up the exterior walls."

All the windows are in, and the interior partitioning and electrical work is being scheduled presently, she added.

"Everything is running really smoothly. The weather earlier in the year, we got lots of rain and stuff like that, but fortunately for us it hasn't held us back."

There have been no delays so far, and barring any unforeseen issues, the project will continue to be on schedule, she noted.

There are still many things to do before the opening, such as interior finishing and decorating, hiring staff, and receiving clients through Alberta Health Services (AHS)

Transition Services, but that will come with time, she said.

AHS officials will assess clients in their care and then transfer them to the centre depending on needs, so the BCS only has to focus on staffing and construction, while AHS will help populate the building once complete, she noted.

"I don't know at what point that process starts happening, but I would imagine a few months out before the opening," she noted.

The Bethany Care Centre will provide 100 private suites and supportive living services for seniors, she added.

Though it's too early to tell exactly when they will open, she noted it will very likely be at some point in spring.

"(Didsbury is) a great community and we're really proud to be part of it," she said.

"We're just excited and looking forward to the opening and being able to serve more seniors in Alberta."

Second-largest turnout for annual rodeo

BY KEVIN VINK
MVP Staff

This was the second-best year for attendance for the annual Foothills Cowboys Association Rodeo, hosted by the Didsbury Agricultural Society (DAS), according to secretary Shari Wareman.

She said 1,021 people walked through the gates and that the kids' entertainment was popular.

"It was one of our best years," said Wareman, confirming that there were over 200 competitors and 27 mutton busters — kids that get to ride sheep bareback.

DAS president Craig

Anderson said there were no animals hurt and that it was a good show.

Though he was busy working during the rodeo, he "got to watch the bulls and some of the bays and broncs. So I don't get to watch a lot of it, but from what I did get to see, it was some very good stock," said Anderson. "I think the stock actually won a good percentage of it."

He added that there were rodeo queens and princesses from three other towns in attendance and he was happy about the large crowd turnout.

The results for the various competitions are as follows:

Pushing antique tractors to the max

BY KEVIN VINK
MVP Staff

The annual Clifford Scott Antique Tractor Pull went off without a hitch on Sunday, Aug. 18, and went well, according to Clifford Scott, director of the event.

"It was clockwork," said Scott. "We also put on a mini-pull with a little pedal tractor and a sled for the kids. There must have been about 25 kids got to play, and all the kids got to try the pull on that."

The competitors got two tries each, and the kids got to give it a go during the intermission, he noted.

"Then we had the turtle crawl where the tractors have to be tuned up well. They go as slow as they can without stalling," he said.

"I was the one that kept the rest in line because I had the slowest tractor; it went very well. We had a good crowd and everybody I think enjoyed themselves."

There were 28 tractors with 14 operators, and all the money left over from registration after expenses was donated to the Canadian Cancer Society, he added.

"We try not to have too many expenses, because we'd sooner our donations go there."

"A lot of us put in a lot of time to put this on. It's a fun pull and it happens every year after the rodeo."

Editorial Amanda Lindhout's indomitable spirit

It was more than three years ago when the scribbler interviewed Amanda Lindhout. Having family roots in the city of Red Deer and region, she came to make her first public appearance and presentation in the city following her release several months earlier from the hands of Somali teen kidnappers.

Lindhout, who was a young freelance journalist at the time of her abduction, had little to say about her horrendous ordeal in Somalia. Instead she focused her talk to Red Deerians on her hopes for the future, a passion that for her was never lost, not even in her times of unimaginable darkness.

She still wanted to make a difference, to help Somalis. Lindhout told her audience about her plans to launch the Global Enrichment Foundation, an organization to create more opportunities in Somalia by offering university scholarships to women.

She gave her presentation with skill, passion, strength and integrity. It was impressive.

Afterwards, she agreed to a one-on-one interview. Of course we all wanted to know more. The media, always searching for the best story angle, wanted the juiciest details about her abduction. Lindhout politely told the eager reporters who eagerly gathered around that she was not quite ready to talk about many things that happened during her many months of captivity.

The Toronto Star's Michelle Shephard wrote a column headlined, 'Amanda Lindhout: Gutsy reporter or naïve thrill-seeker?' Her piece offered this catty line: "Online blogs note her dozens of Facebook photos striking glamorous poses amid conflict."

Unfortunately for Lindhout there was much more of that unfairness, including from journalists in Central Alberta who sniffed at her integrity.

Thankfully, however, she was able to focus on what was really important. Her foundation has been a success: earning international respect and support while helping dozens of women in Somalia achieve their higher education dreams.

Her determined mission to make lives better for others has in turn helped heal her once broken soul. The power of forgiveness has also proved to be a guiding light for her healing.

"You can very easily go into anger and bitterness and revenge thoughts and resentment and 'Why me?'" Lindhout told the CBC's The National. "Because I had something very, very large and very painful to forgive, and by choosing to do that, I was able to put into place my vision, which was making Somalia a better place. I've never questioned whether or not it was the right thing to do."

And now she has written a book, A House in the Sky, co-authored by Sara Corbett, a contributing writer with the New York Times Magazine.

The book, which will be released next month, will address many of those "juicy" details of her captivity she once declined to talk about.

More than anything though, it will be a profound document on how the human spirit can rise above and beyond any time of trial and darkness, an indomitable shining spirit at that – a lesson from a once aspiring, and yes, inexperienced journalist who has beaten all the naysayers with the best story of them all.

Letters to the editor It's time to stop the whistle

My wife and I retired to the wonderful town of Didsbury in 2004. Hardly a day goes by where we don't feel enriched and blessed to live in this community.

There is one caveat – the sound of CPR whistles 24 hours a day, disrupting our town as the trains either blast through from the south, struggle up from the north, or move CPR cars around the siding in the dead of night.

Three whistles for every crossing! Twenty-four hours a day! Three hundred and sixty five days a year!

We live about two blocks from the track and I really sympathize with those people who live closer, especially during hot summer nights when bedroom windows need to be open.

Downtown during the day, hundreds of Didsbury conversations stop while these behemoths whistle their way through town.

It's time to stop the whistle!

Views have been expressed by a major town official that he is unaware of discontent in this regard (in addition to the insinuation I interpret) and that CP Rail was here before we were.

No longer a valid point. We live in a different era. This is 2013 and CP is no longer the local asset it used to be, and I am now going on official record on behalf of our little neighbourhood.

In consultation with our neighbours, our little end of Didsbury is tired of having our conversations interrupted, our sleep screwed up, and just the overall quality of life compromised by these whistles.

Olds has fenced its section of track and the silence up there is beautiful. If we can't afford to do it all in one fiscal year, then let's at least get started this year.

The candidates who support this initiative will be receiving my electoral support this fall, and I suspect that of our neighbours as well.

Bill Nicoll,
Didsbury

Just want to enjoy the park

I have tried several times to access the wetlands area to walk my dog.

I was unhappy to find the road I used to take and park by has been blocked off. A friend was told by bylaw officers that they blocked the road because of nightly partying by some young people, and the fine for going around the barricades is $120.

Well that is supposed to be a public area. Yes, there is parking on the upper area at the ball diamonds. That is fine for the able-bodied.

The hills are steep and anyone with a disability like COPD or any other ailment that makes climbing difficult are denied the ability to enjoy the park.

We all pay taxes and should not be discriminated against because we have difficulty climbing several hills. Maybe the binoculars should be used at night instead of trying to catch law-abiding citizens on a stroll.

Who Passed Away August 25, 2007

*If tears could build a stairway.
And memories were a lane.
I would walk right up to heaven,
To bring you home again.
No farewell words were spoken,
No time to say goodbye.
You were gone before I knew it,
And only God knows why.
My heart still aches in sadness,
And secret tears still flow.
What it meant to lose you,
No one will ever know.*
